

CHEMTRAIL FLU 2016

Quite a few years ago I noticed that there was a strange sort of contrail that came from the back of jet liners as they flew over where I lived at the time. I noticed that the contrails did not dissipate after the plane had left our region of sky but instead, they seemed to fan out and many of them would seem to join, turning a beautiful blue sky into a hazy gray sky.

Of course, the anomaly that I was seeing caused me to do some research. Early on it was hard to find anything on the phenomena and when I would talk with people about it, I was dismissed as being a kook that wrote a conspiracy into a normal thing.

As the years went by it became apparent that many others were seeing the same thing that I was and that it was anomalous and unlike the contrails that we had been used to, even as young children. I started to read stories about these trails, that came to be labeled Chemtrails, were actually descending from the sky at times and settling to the ground. I learned that people that came into contact with the material sometimes became sick with a variety of different symptoms, some as simple as symptoms of the common cold but others with things called Morgellons. Morgellons have yet to be identified, but they appear to be some sort of particle or parasite that lives under and emerges from the skin from time to time. As you would guess, those who report having Morgellons are labeled as delusional. I have not personally seen a case of Morgellons, but I have received many descriptions from people who have, and they appear to be real.

Around 2005 I became friends with Jim Wilhelmsen, a researcher from Roswell, New Mexico. Aside from being an avid researcher, Jim liked to ride his motorcycle. He tells a story of riding his bike somewhere near Roswell and during the ride he says that something started to descend from the sky; a substance that could not be avoided. Without protection and open to the elements, Jim breathed the substance in and continued his ride. Afterward, Jim started to experience mid to lower respiratory symptoms and was laid up for a while. He seemed to get better but from time to time his symptoms would flare up and he would feel sick again. Later he would be diagnosed with a precancerous condition for which he received treatment. Jim's still alive and kicking, proving that Yahweh has other plans for Jim's life.

When I was a kid, I had to attend gym class like all of the other kids. Whenever we had running exercises, I would always feel a tightness in my larynx (throat) but being a kid I thought that this was normal and all of those that ran got the same feeling. Thinking back now I can deduce that I had a little bit of asthma, but nothing debilitating and it never really effected my life. Aside from that, I was a totally healthy child who grew up into a totally healthy man. As far as my lungs are concerned, I did get pneumonia back around 1985 but that was cured with a regimen of penicillin and I never had any ill side effects afterward. I rarely got sick as an adult. Oh, I had the occasional flu and some colds, but I always got over them quickly and completely.

Back in 2007 I met a wonderful woman online and we made plans to meet in April of 2008. It was a hard time for Lourdes because her sister died from colon cancer in December of the prior year and her mother died from emphysema late in February of 2008. We decided that toward the middle of April would be a good time to meet. I would ask for her father's hand in marriage and propose at the end of this almost month-long trip.

I boarded the only flight that left for Mexico City around midnight. The red-eye flight was the only flight offered from Sacramento airport. I tried to sleep but really couldn't. It was at dawn that I looked out of my seat's window and noticed that we were cutting through some funny looking clouds. The clouds were parallel to our flight plan and I could see about six pairs of these clouds. It was then that I realized that we were cutting through a chemtrail that some airplane had left there previously. I didn't worry too much seeing that someone that I thought was wise had informed me that jet liners never take in outside air, but they recycle the air that is in the cabin. Therefore, I reasoned, the chemtrail material would stay outside and not affect me.

After a short layover in Guadalajara for a custom's check we boarded back onto the plane to continue to Mexico City. My future wife met me in the airport and we were brought back to their home by their family's driver. On the way to their family home I started to get a tickle in my throat which turned into a cough by the time that we arrived in the Florida District of Mexico City. To make a long story short, that little tickle turned into an unproductive cough that persisted not only during my weeks in Mexico City, but for about three months after I returned back to California. I remember thinking, "oh great, her dad is going to think that I have TB or something." I am sure that the pollution in Mexico City didn't help my condition, but I grew up in Bergen County, New Jersey where the air was constantly polluted and I drove through plumes of DDT spray when I was a kid and it never caused me this kind of breathing problem.

After I finally recovered it was time for me to fly back to Mexico City to marry Lourdes. We decided to have an actual wedding for her family's sake and then we would have a wedding in California three months later to satisfy the Immigration Authorities. We married just a few days after I arrived and then we went to Tepotzlan to spend our honeymoon night there and then for almost two weeks at a friend's home on the mountainside of Acapulco Bay. I had not ill lung effects during that time. If it had been Mexico City's air pollution, I should have been affected during my few days there.

I noticed that while we were married and living in Sacramento, I would get an occasional flareup of what the doctors labeled bronchitis. I had never had bronchitis in my life prior to this, EVER! When respiratory illness went around, if I caught the but it would last for months while others got over it in a week or so. I found this alarming but never put my finger on it. At the end of December of 2010 my Lourdes succumbed to meningitis brought on by a burst brain abscess. After close to a year of mourning I met and later married my current wife. I moved to the Willamette Valley of Oregon which is where she lived and we married a few weeks later. My wife has three daughters by her first husband and each of them have children, all whom are very dear to me. Two of the youngest's daughter's children have chronic asthma and often they would spend time with us. I remember one October her two younger children came to spend the weekend with us and her little girl coughed in my face. About three days later I came down with bronchitis and it lasted until around the first of the year. I had no sooner gotten better than the kids spent more time with us and the little girl coughed again which resulted in three more months of bronchitis. The next couple of years were relatively bronchitis free and I thought that I was on the mend, finally. At or around November of 2015 I was teaching at a local trade college. At that time an upper respiratory bug was going around that was nasty even to people without breathing problems. Of course, I caught it even though I isolated myself from the students in the class and washed my hands like we nurses have always been trained to do. At the middle of February, I decided to go and see a doctor who diagnosed me with asthmatic bronchitis. He gave me inhalers and sent me home. A month later I returned to the doctor because if anything, the condition was worse. I was given a stronger inhaler and sent home. Not getting results from a medical group that didn't seem to want to fix things I saw an outside doctor who increased my inhaler strength again and gave me a script for Singulair. I actually started to feel better. Right around this time I started a new job and I had to climb some stairs to get into the building and found that I was very winded, so after taking the Singulair I actually got some of my breathing back. The problem is that even today my breathing is still a little diminished and I still wheeze quite a bit, both indications that asthma still exists.

Back during the time that my granddaughter coughed on me and I got the bad bronchitis I started to do more serious research. First, I found out that jet liners really do take in air from the outside, so it is very possible that I was exposed to whatever that chemtrail contained. I also compared symptoms with Jim Wilhelmsen and noticed that many of them were the same. I went online to research from the small and independent researchers, you know the kind, those who are not associated with any interests that could cause them to lie. I found one particular site run by a man named Russ Tanner. I found it very informative and helpful. I found something that I had never seen before, but that others have both suffered from and have named, they call it Chemtrail Flu.

The problem with the Chemtrail Flu is that it seems to be something that becomes a chronic condition. It is as if it waits in the shadows for a primary infection, like the common cold or the common flu and then it kicks into gear, making something that healthy people get over quickly into something that is almost debilitating. I have told my wife that during the fall, winter and spring that I really need to know that the grandchildren are not infected with any sort of virus or bacterial infection. We have resolved that if either of us gets sick that I will retreat to the living room couch, easy-chair or upstairs to the spare bedroom. Getting any sickness that has to do with breathing isn't good for me. I have to be more diligent at work and outside the home to wash hands like my life depends on it, but it may well be that way.

So why would the government or any company want to spray something into the air that would affect people in such an evil way? Well, if you've ever read the edicts on the Georgia Guidestones, you know that the Elites would like for the population of the Earth to be lowered to no more than five hundred million people. Given today's world population of 7.2 billion people, that would mean they would have to cause the deaths of just under 7 billion people. I would say that aside from dropping a nuclear device on large population areas (which would destroy the earth) the best way and the fastest way is to create an illness that will take out hundreds of millions if not billions of people. The plague in Europe back in the Middle Ages killed millions of people as well as the Spanish Influenza epidemic back around 1917. My paternal great grandmother lost four siblings from influenza during that time frame. One way to destroy a people is to take away their defenses, or to weaken them so that someone or something else can destroy them. By giving people like myself a predisposition to getting bad cases of bronchitis after simple flulike illnesses is a perfect way to rid the world of what the Elites call "undesirables."

Another way that the Elites can destroy us is by the use of GMO foods. It's a fact that all corn grown in the US has been genetically modified. Much of it is modified so that it has a much higher fructose content. Before we had a falling out with Cuba, we imported a lot of sugar grown from sugarcane. It was a natural and untainted sugar source. When our population was smaller in the US the supply of cane sugar from Hawaii and Cuba was enough to sustain the demand in the

US. When products from Cuba were banned the supply of sugar from Hawaii didn't meet the demand of the US population so manufacturers started to use corn fructose made from real corn. When science caught up and was able to produce corn with a higher fructose content something called High Fructose Corn Syrup was utilized to sweeten products. The problem is that HFCS cannot be produced properly in the human body and it affects the liver negatively plus it causes fatty deposits to build up on our organs. A snippet from an article written by someone at Harvard University explains it well. Be sure to click on the link to the full article after you finish this blog entry:

The entry of fructose into the liver kicks off a series of complex chemical transformations. (You can see a diagram of these at health.harvard.edu/172.) One remarkable change is that the liver uses fructose, a carbohydrate, to create fat. This process is called lipogenesis. Give the liver enough fructose, and tiny fat droplets begin to accumulate in liver cells (see figure). This buildup is called nonalcoholic fatty liver disease, because it looks just like what happens in the livers of people who drink too much alcohol.

Virtually unknown before 1980, nonalcoholic fatty liver disease now affects up to 30% of adults in the United States and other developed countries, and between 70% and 90% of those who are obese or who have diabetes.

Early on, nonalcoholic fatty liver disease is reversible. At some point, though, the liver can become inflamed. This can cause the low-grade damage known as nonalcoholic steatohepatitis (steato meaning fat and hepatitis meaning liver inflammation). If the inflammation becomes severe, it can lead to cirrhosis — an accumulation of scar tissue and the subsequent degeneration of liver function. What most fail to realize is that Corporate America is for the most part parasitic in nature. A parasite is defined as something that lives off a host life-form. With companies like Monsanto the produce products that destroy us from the inside while they work in concert with other companies that destroy us from the outside and with drug companies that keep us alive as long as possible so that every possible dollar can be taken before we finally succumb. All of the food is tainted, the water is rapidly being undrinkable and the drug companies are keeping up pace just enough to keep us alive to suffer a miserable existence through a variety of diseases and conditions that we all need drugs for along with food to sustain us, or so they say.

A few years ago, I met a woman who was a friend of a friend. This woman is environmentally conscience and stands up for such causes. I asked this woman what her thoughts were on Chemtrails. She said that she knew that they are real. She also said something that totally blew me aside. She said that a friend of hers had a meeting with Barack Obama who confided in her that Chemtrails are real and that they are being used to protect us from the sun during our crisis of global warming. Basically, they are used to bounce radiation back into space and guard us from the sun's harmful rays, according to Obama.

The thing is this, that is what clouds do. Clouds filter harmful UV rays. Then let me pose a question that blows the global warming theory out of the water. Living in Oregon I have flown from Portland to other destinations. We have a lot of rain in Oregon and also a lot of clouds. When leaving Portland and also arriving there I have personally seen chemtrails above the rain clouds. Why spray above something that is going to do what chemtrails are supposed to do, and much more effectively than chemtrails. The answer is simply that they want the ingredients in the chemtrails to mix with the clouds so that it can intermingle with the rain and bring whatever is in those chemtrails right down to our doorsteps, our lawns and our whole terrestrial environment. Those who are in charge of chemtrail spraying are insidious people and they know just how to affect us and infect us. They are implicit in carrying out the first of the Georgia Guidestone's Illuminati Ten Commandments, "Maintain humanity under 500,000,000 in perpetual balance with nature."

What I expect is that someday, when they are ready, we will witness one of the most devious and purposeful flu epidemics that has ever been unleashed against humanity. Many of us with weakened respiratory systems will probably not survive without divine intervention. Others, who have eaten beef tainted with hormones and antibiotics along with those who have eaten vegetables tainted with pesticides will succumb because they have compromised immune systems. Those who have insisted on getting vaccine injections will succumb too because their immune systems have been severely compromised because of mercury in the injections as well as the DNA of other plants and animals that are used to produce the vaccines. It will be a literal holocaust epidemic that very few will escape.
