

LGBT AGENDA AND ISLAMIC AGENDA BOTH HAVE THE SAME AUTHOR

As an older believer in Yeshua, I've seen the attacks in the way of eroding the rights of people with a Judeo/Christian ethic. Yeshua said that the world would persecute us because we are not of this world and He also said that if the world hated Him, it would hate us also. So, it should come as no surprise that groups like LGBT (lesbian, gay, bi-sexual and transgender), Islam, atheists and others would constantly try to go for the jugular of the Body of Mashiach. Those of us who ardently believe in and believe Yeshua know that homosexuality is a sin and those who deny the deity of Mashiach are influenced by the spirit of Antichrist. The whole world is influenced by that spirit, but those in greater sin are the ones who are the loudest when it comes to casting dispersion on those of us who follow Yeshua, or follow Torah wholeheartedly.

Before I continue, I must make a distinction. The LGBT community often refers to themselves as the LGBTH community. The extra letter stands for HIV positive. I refuse to use that last letter because it lumps those non-deviant people with deviants. There are people who have gotten HIV as a result of rape, blood transfusions and other ways not related to sexual deviant behavior. Therefore, I will never add the "H" to the end of the LGBT acronym.

I will state categorically that when I make the statement that the LGBT and Islamists have the same agenda, I am being discriminatory. Now, before you go and make a big deal and call me a bigot, a racist, Islamophobic or homophobic, let me explain the meaning of discriminate. Before its corruptive definition came into being, "discriminate" meant to tell the difference between one thing and another. Yes, it means to judge, but that judgment is to differentiate between two or more things. For instance, if I go into a grocery store and see two bins, one contained apples and the other containing oranges, and they are both labeled as apples, I will immediately determine that one of the signs is wrong because I know what apples and oranges look nothing like each other. I am practicing discrimination. If in the same store there are peaches next to nectarines, I will have to discriminate a little more. I will look at them closely and touch them if necessary because I know that each has a unique texture. Again, I am being discriminatory. Society has seriously done this word an injustice, because it has been twisted from its original definition and is used to label people who are racists, or make determinations on people for the purpose of doing harm or causing hardship. In scripture, we are told to judge the fruit that people produce in order to know if they genuinely belong to Yahweh or if they are counterfeits. The Greek word for being a Judge, that is, to condemn or sentence, is Krino. It is obvious that this is something that we're strongly told not to do, and this is the word that uninformed Christians, and worldly people who think that they are bible scholars, like to throw at people who are judging fruit of people, actions or deeds. The word Diakrino means to: to separate, make a distinction, to learn from discrimination, to try, to decide.

Oddly enough, many people look at similarities in order to discriminate by matching two things that look alike against things that do not have a similarity to the others. The child's show, "Sesame Street," was a big proponent of this sort of discrimination. Remember the words to their song, "One of these things is not like the other. One of these things is not the same..." I seriously doubt that anyone out there would have the nerve to declare that Sesame Street taught discrimination in a bad way.

Fingerprint experts practice discrimination. They take one set of fingerprints and compare them against a data-bank of fingerprints to find the closest or an exact match. When they do find a match, they know that the two sets of prints are unique from all others. Handwriting experts discriminate when they compare writing samples to determine if a person wrote the same two documents or signatures. Shoppers in the produce section of a store feel melons to discriminate as to which melon is ripe and which ones are not. When you or I are going a little too fast on the freeway and we feel paranoid that we might get a ticket only to have someone pass us going much faster, we have in a way discriminated that we are safe because the officer two miles down the road will use his radar to determine that the other guy deserves a ticket more than we do. Does everyone get the picture?

Authors are interesting people. We either like or dislike an author because of their writing style. We do the same with actors because of the way that they act. Now, we come to another word that the world has corrupted, that word being "profile." In this word's corrupted form, it is used to describe people who "stereotype" others and lump all people of one race, creed or color into one or more categories. I've been stereotyped many times, and I don't like it a bit. Being partly of Italian ancestry, and coming from New Jersey, people here in the west often ask me if I or any of my relatives were in the Mafia. By the way, since I brought it up, I categorically deny any connection to such organizations, and if you knew how my paternal grandfather suffered because he wouldn't buy into corruption, you would know for sure that such suggestions are insulting. However, knowing that this is something asked out of ignorance, I just brush it off. Coming from Jewish stock, I've been called a Christ Killer, been spit on and been persecuted by many a so-called Christian. Again, these things are said out of ignorance, so I just consider the source and move on.

Profiling's true meaning is: describe (a person or organization, especially a public figure) in a short article. Profiling is also used to describe a person or people who can take well known facts about certain criminal types, or psychiatric types and identify them because of traits or modus operandi. Many police departments have profiler's that are able to look at a crime scene and forensic evidence to determine a person's demographics and narrow down the list of possible suspects.

It's not hard to profile groups. For instance, if you have a coworker or friend that doesn't drink alcohol, take drugs, hates profanity and goes to church every Sunday, you can pretty well profile that they are a Fundamental Christian. If you go to another friend's house and they don't eat pork or shellfish, have Torah's and Talmud volumes in their library, and they go to service on Friday night or Saturday, you can pretty well assume that they are Orthodox Jews. There are similarities between groups too. Both of the groups mentioned in this paragraph are basically peace-loving people. They both love their God, which incidentally, is the same God. They both sing songs of praise and worship and when we look deeper, they're basically indivisible. Both have an agenda to love and please God and to coexist with each other, and that has been the heritage in America for almost 250 years.

In recent years there have been others who have become much more active and have similar agendas. Just as the two groups above have a similar agenda because they serve the same author, the LGBT and Islam have similar agendas because they have the same author. There are differences, in that ardent Islamist's do not tolerate or condone the LGBT community, and, when they are a majority in a society, they kill members of that community. What is odd is that the LGBT community for the most part support Islam because they see Islam as another supposedly "persecuted" population. In an even odder twist, there are many liberal Jews and liberals in general that stand up for the rights of Islam, not realizing that Islam doesn't condone or endorse liberalism and they tend to kill liberals.

Let me go down a rabbit trail and try to tie something together. I mentioned that Islamist's do not like or tolerate liberalism. Islamist's are not stupid people. They have eyes and ears and they can discern a true believer in Yeshua from lukewarm counterfeits. A few years ago I was working in a pharmacy in Sacramento. They had hired for or five Muslims who seemed to be nice people, at least outwardly. One Halloween, most of the staff, except for one Catholic and myself, were in the break-room doing the usual Halloween stuff; costume judging, eating orange and black cakes and candies and other such things. I was talking with my Catholic friend Roger when one of the Muslims, a man named Abdullah came through the warehouse. He asked me why I was not in the break room with the other people. I became sort of indignant and said, "I am a Christian and I serve Yeshua. I don't agree with what's going on in the other room nor will I ever participate in Satanism." Abdullah looked sort of shocked, like he was searching for words to say. After a moment, he looked at me, smiled and said, "Finally, a Christian that stands up his religion and practices Christianity." I was honored and blessed by that. The lesson here is that even Muslims know what Christians are supposed to be like, and they notice liberals because of the actions of liberals are liberal in nature. What an indictment on the Church when a Muslim knows better than most of the Church how the church should act. They are able to discriminate between serious believers in Yeshua, and counterfeits. They know the agenda of a true believer and although faith in Yeshua and those with faith in Allah are technically at war, they have an air of respect for people with fidelity.

The one big similarity that I see Islam and the LGBT community sharing is that they play the victim. Both, when in low numbers population wise tend to keep quiet and to themselves. They act courteous to people not in their grouping and they seek peace and harmony with others. This I call the misunderstood (persecution) phase. Because they are low in number, they feel persecuted because of that. In low numbers they are the "lowly homosexuals," and the lowly Muslims. Both try to seek an inroad into society by growing in numbers and evangelizing those who do not think like them. For years, the homosexual community has perpetrated their status as persecuted in order to gain the sympathies of liberal America. This worked like a charm. Some felt so bad about the "supposed" persecution, that they became bi-curious and later became homosexual themselves. The same thing happens with the Muslims. The poor "supposedly" persecuted Muslims found an ear in liberal America. Soon after that we had to hear (ad nauseam) how Islam is a religion of peace and how it wasn't fair to categorize all Muslims as radical. The fact that almost half of America voted for and elected a Muslim president shows the ignorance of America and how the American people's sympathies cause them to be played the sucker every time.

After the misunderstanding phase ends, then the acceptance phase begins. In my grandfather's day, homosexuals never revealed themselves as being different. Things were done in the shadows and very few knew. In my dad's generation, homosexuality was still not accepted, but it was laughed at. I remember my parents watching Liberace on television and remarking about how he was a homosexual and I remember people laughing at his feminine ways. My generation was neither here or there where homosexuals were concerned. They were like bumblebees; you don't bother them and they won't bother you. This being the case, homosexuals started to evangelize and were quite successful. We didn't consider homosexuals to be mentally disaffected, they were just people who were different. Later generations would accept the homosexual lifestyle to be genetically bent, that people were just born with that tendency and with that they became an oppressed people and, like I said, Americans will always champion the underdog, no matter who or what they are.

The Islamic people in America went through a misunderstood phase. Americans tend to mistreat those that they can't understand, but I have never heard pre-911 of any Muslims being mistreated. People in America did lash out just after 911 and this caused the Muslim community to cry foul and persecution. The government went through stringent measures to downplay the Islamic involvement in 911 and Muslim organizations like CAIR (Council for American Islamic Relations) mounted guilt campaigns and discrimination charges to goad Americans into believing that Muslims were victims.

The acceptance phase for Islamist's came quickly, so much so that a man with a Muslim name, Barack Hussein Obama was elected President of The United States. Since then, Islam has gone right into the retribution phase. They have placed people in high places in government, have demanded that elements of Sharia law be implemented in American society and if a Christian or Jew so much as raise an eyebrow at a Muslim they are labeled as prejudice and discriminatory.

The LGBT agenda has performed similar militant actions in their retribution phase. Fearing lawsuits and legal action, businesses, governments and individuals have been coerced into accepting deviant lifestyles. Businesses have been sued for not catering to homosexual needs and schools have been forced to teach the homosexual lifestyle to students as part of an acceptable and normal way of life. The LGBT agenda, though claiming not to be militant, has forced its ways upon the American people, and if you do not accept their lifestyle, you are a bigot and intolerant.

The thing that makes it worse is that many other groups use the same tactics, and are always backed up by liberals and liberal tactics. Racial groups like La Raza, the NAACP and a variety of other groups use the same tactics. The same scenario; we're downtrodden, to we're recognized, to now we're going to make you suffer; is making its way through society. The shameful thing is that liberal Christians are the biggest offenders at casting judgment of people who stick to Biblical principles. According to the Bible, Islam is a false gospel because it countermands Biblical doctrine. According to the Bible, homosexuality is unnatural and a sin; one that Yahweh holds so serious that he's destroyed the world once and several cities with fire and sulfur. I've found that so called "believers" who have homosexual relatives are the most critical of anyone who talks against homosexuality. Well, when we come to faith in Yeshua, we choose Him and we choose what He thinks about an issue. We here from liberal Christians, how there are good Muslims and bad Muslims. Talk to Christians that have escaped from Syria or Iraq recently and I think that you'll find that once Sharia becomes law, ALL Muslims adhere to it. Stories came out of Iraq recently, how Christians were turned over to ISIS by their Muslim neighbors who were "good Muslims" until didn't have to be good anymore. If people are living contrary to Biblical standards, they think contrary to Biblical standards. If you state that you believe the Bible to be true and infallible Word of Yahweh, you will be hated by those who live riotously contrary to the Bible. The Koran teaches its readers to oppress, torture and kill Christians and Jews. Adherents of Islam, who use the Koran as a codex will act according to that codex.

So, what tactics do the LGBT and Islamic communities use? They use deception, coercion, lies, bullying. They put people and business out of work and out of business. They defame people and the ultimate aim of each is a world where they are the majority and where their way of life is considered normal and all other ways are the ways of infidels and the intolerant. Seeing that their ways are brutal, coercive and their agendas are accomplished using lies, litigation and subjugation, it is obvious that the author of both is the adversary of the God of the Bible, Yahweh. And, it should be obvious that since they both single out real believers in Yeshua, and Jews should be a deciding indicator when determining who their god is. Scripture says that Satan seeks to steal, kill and destroy. This is the definition of the core purpose of both the LGBT and Islamic communities. Homosexuals have stolen the rainbow, which is Yahweh's symbol of a covenant, they've stolen the word "gay" which originally meant happy and carefree. They have stolen the innocence of our youth and younger adults. They have stolen and nearly destroyed the meaning of marriage, and they're killing any idea of what Yahweh meant to be normal and natural. Islam is stealing our freedom, our rights and the wills of weak-willed individuals. They've killed innumerable numbers of Jews, Christians, Hindu's and other religious peoples. They've destroyed every nation in which they've become a majority and they seek to destroy everyone and anything that stands against their conquest of the whole world. These are not the actions of the Bible's God, Yahweh Elohim; they are the actions of Yahweh's adversary, who if he was allowed to have his way, would destroy all of humankind.
